7.1. Historical Background

Nasirabad is named after the great Baloch leader Nasir Khan Noori, the founder of the Baloch Union. He ruled the Kalat Khanate from 1747-1794. Prior to its notification as district, Nasirabad was part of Sibi district, when Sibi was a part of Thal Chutiali (Sibi, Harnai, Mach, Dhadar, Gandawa and Bhag Including Lehri), and made a separate district in October 1903 comprising Kohlu, Dera Bugti, Ziarat, Nasirabad areas. Presently the district consists of Tehsil Sibi, Harnai and Lehri.

7.2. Tribes, Ethnic Groups and Languages

Nasirabad District has an ethnically heterogeneous population. Major Baloch tribes of the district are Umrani, Khosa, Bijarani, Kanrani, Gajani, Nindwani, Bajkani and Jamali. Major ethnic group is the Baloch followed by Jamoot, Brahvi, Sindhi and Saraiki. Umrani is the economically and politically influenced Baloch tribe: speaks Sindhi and Balochi.

The Jamoots are further divided into sub-tribes who speak Sindhi and Saraiki. They are in strength but are less distinct as an ethnic community, mainly due to being poor and politically weak. Most of them are tenants and petty-tillers on the lands owned by Umrans and other landlords. The Jamoots claim to be Balochs. The other groups settled in the area include Saraiki, Pushto and Punjabi speaking. There are also a number of settlers from Sindh who have claimed local status. Jamoots and Syeds are akin to Sindhi culture. They live in both provinces.

Balochi and Sindhi are the major languages spoken in the district followed by Brahvi and Sairaki. Urdu is used as a medium of education and as means of communication between people with different ethnic backgrounds. There is also a small number of Pushto speaking population in the district. (Nasirabad - A District Profile, 2003)

7.3. Climate

The climate of district Nasirabad is extremely hot with long summers, and pleasant to cold winters. Humidity increases in summer, particularly in the area adjacent to the Pat Feeder Canal. Dust storms are common in summer season; however, they have lost their intensity due to increase of vegetation frequency. A dust storm may also be followed by rain. Rainy season is mostly in the monsoon, in the months of July and August.

7.4. Topography

Population Characteristics

In Pakistan, male population is more than the female population and is among those four countries where life expectancy for female, at birth, is less than that of males. Sex ratio in Nasirabad is 111 male per 100 females, which is more than the ratio at the National level that is 106. Though there could be other possible reasons for such a difference in male to female ratio, one probable reason of this ratio could be underreporting of females during national surveys. Besides, a very high maternal mortality rate and poor health care, both at the district and the province level, are likely to be instrumental lesser number of women. District Nasirabad is rural by its characteristics, like majority of the districts in Balochistan, and more than Eighty four percent of the population resides in rural areas.
